I grew up next to Larry. He was about 15 years older than I was so we never hung around together. But he was always a good guy. Never forget the night he called me and told me to meet him at Grove Place to help him dig a grave. We hit a huge boulder part way through. Larry says Ill be right back. He comes back with a half a stick of TNT, tamped it under that big boulder and blew it to smithereens. Blew small rocks all over the houses on Marshall Rd. He was quite the character. Three years ago my brother and I flew into Rochester (from Phoenix) to bury our dads ashes next to our mother. 50 years to the day that we buried her. Larry showed up (as did Kathy and Phil) to pay their respects to a man they knew growing up. Will never forget that act of kindness. RIP old friend.
